JUDGE HAGNER DIES AT H STREET HOME

Arrangements For Funeral Will Be Announced By Family Later.

Judge Alexander Burton Hagner, one of Washington's oldest residents, died at his home, 1818 H street northwest, this morning ,after an ilness which confined him to his home for a wek. Arrangements for the funeral will be announced later.

Graduate of Princeton. Alexander Burton Hagner was born

July 13, 1826. He was the first Third Auditor of the Treasury. He was awarded the degree of A. B. by Prince ton in 1845 and later was given the degree of LL.D. by St. John's College. He was admitted to the bar in 1848 and practiced his profession in Annapolis, Baltimore, and elsewhere.

He was elected a member of the Maryland Legislature in 1854 and was Maryland Legislature in 1854 and was made chairman of the ways and means committee; he was an elector on the Bell and Everett ticket in 1860; was a Whig candidate in 1867 for Congressman from Maryland in a Democratic district.

In 1879 he was made an associate justice of the District Supreme Court and retired in 1903. He was formerly president of the Columbian Historical Society, and a member of the American Historical Association and the Virginia Historical Society, and also of the National Conservation Association.

He was at one time president of the Old South River Club of Maryland, and held membership in the Aziec Club, the Academy of Political Science, of New York; the Washington Society of Fine Arts, the Cosmos Club, and the Sons of the American Revolution.

NEW YORK, May 30 .- "My daughter is being used as a 'scapegoat;' she is absolutely innocent of any wrongdoing." declared Mrs. William Fuller doing," declared Mrs. William Fuller here today, when asked of the report that her daughter, Mrs. Meta Sinclair, divorced wife of Upton Sinclair, was named as co-respondent in a divorce suit at Millen, Ga.

"I know William G. Raoul, whose in a courses my daughter and he is a wife accuses my daughter, and he is a tine man." continued Mrs. Fuller. "My daughter visiting them it is true. She is not hiding, though, as reported— she has nothing to hide for."

Claims McHenry Wanted

he and McHenry laughed and Forney remarked that I shouldn't be chicken-hearted. Forney told me later that the man he wanted out of the way was his father-in-law, Mr. Schneider, who owns the Cairo.

"I first met Forney when he summoned me to appear as a witness in a case in which he was appearing as the attorney. On April 1 a collie dog was run over by a truck in Columbia road near Connecticut avenue, I happened to be riding by on my bicycle at the time and saw the accident. Forney represented the owner of the dog against the owner of the truck. The case was settled in Forney's office, the owner of the truck paying $50 for the killing of the dog.

"I have seen the man three times since that, each time at his office by appointment. After the conversation in which he asked me to take part in putting Mr. Schneider out of the way, Forney asked me to call in about two weeks.

"Well, are you going to Pittsburgh with us to carry out this job?' Forney asked me when I met him in his office. This probably was a week before fice. This probably was a week before the assault upon Mr. Schneider occurred. I told him no. He told me I mustn't mention anything about what he had said to me, and led me to believe that he and McHenry were going to put their plans to kill Mr. Schneider into effect.

"Really I had thought all along that Forney was joking about killing his father-in-law. It wasn't until I met him the third time that I began to awaken to the fact that he was probably in earnest. Several times after he had mentioned the plot to me at the second meeting I had thought of going to Mr. Schneider and baring just what Forney had proposed.

"Then on second thought I assured myself that Mr. Schneider wouldn't believe. After all, I thought again that Forney surely was jesting about the matter, and that if I told Mr. Schneider I might probably make a fool of myself."

Young Bowers declared that he had met McHenry but once, and that was the second time that he visited For-"It was after I had told him that 1 would not go to Pittsburgh that he told me that he had put my name to the action of the grand jury at a committal hearing here today. Mr. Schneider, with his forehead still bandaged because of the assault here last Thursday morning, was a witness against the two men. Not once did Forney permit his eyes to meet those of his father-in-law, although the latter made every effort to bring this about. During the brief preliminary hearing before Police Magistrate J. J. Sweeney, Mr. Schneider seldom took his eyes off Forney, and there was no kindliness in them. Forney, with head down, nerv-ously made notes on a scrap of paper. Forney Covers Face.

A camera squad made flashlight photographs in the police courtroom. Mc-Henry faced the cameras unflinchingly, but Forney endeavored to keep his hand Efforts will be made by Attorney William Le Gulloun to obtain bail for Forney, but the amount has not been fixed. McHenry was not represented by an attorney today.

It was regarded as strange that no relative of Forney appeared at today's hearing. His father, uncle and brother were here earlier in the week and conferred with counsel, but Forney stood uncomforted by ties of relationship at the bar of justice today.

Attorney Le Gulloun, however, said this was not to be construed as meaning that his family has deserted the young Washington attorney. It is understood the father and uncle of the accused will assist him to arrange bail later.

McHenry took the committment proceedings with stoicism. Forney was nervous and whispered frequently with his attorney. Once when the housekeeper of the Hotel Anderson identified Forney as the man she saw fumbling with the lock of Schneider's room, last Wednesday, the son-in-law of the assaulted man shook his head vigorously.

Schneider Forney soon will apply for a divorce against her accused husband was intimated by her father.

When asked if Forney carried out his intention to write his wife last Sunday afternoon, Mr. Schneider replied:

"He was sane enough to come into our home and behave himself so well that he was accepted as a son-in-law," said Mr. Schneider bitterly. "He was sane enough to attend to his law practice, and he was sane enough to engineer a plot against my life. Insane, bah!"

Mr. Schneider expressed his gratitude for the consideration shown by Washington and Pittsburgh newspapers under circumstances trying to his family. The Times, he said, had been gratifyingly fair, accurate, and complete in its handling of the sensational story.

Neither prisoner said anything dur-ing the entire hearing, and Attorney Gulloun asked but few questions. William E. Morris, manager of the Hotel Anderson, identified McHenry as a guest of his hotel last week. He said McHenry paid the bill for the two men, who were registered under the of Betzer and Hamilton. Mrs. Adelaide Richards, hotel house keeper, identified Forney as the man she saw trying to unlock the Schneider

Mr. Schneider related how he had entered his room about 12:30 o'clock Wednesday night only to be struck on the head with a hammer as he turned to switch on the electric lights. He grappled with the assailant, he said jabbing an umbrella into his stomach. The assailant broke away and started down the hall and at that time a second man rushed by Schneider and was jabbed by the umbrella.

"I turned on the light quickly to see if others were in my room and then started after the two men," said Mr. Schneider.

"Did you recognize either of the two men?" asked Mr. Le Gulloun.

room last Wednesday.

Didn't Want to Say.

"I don't want to say now," replied Mr. Schneider. Judge Sweeney told the witness to answer the question, and, addressing Attorney Le Gulloun, Mr. Schneider said:

"If you mean did I recognize either of the men in the room, I answer, no."

Mr. Le Gulloun di dnot ask if Schneider recognized, or thought he recognized, the culprits as he chased them down the hall.

The hammer, he said, was dropped in the flight of the midnight assailants.

At the conclusion of this testimony, Magistrate Sweeney announced the two prisoners would be bound over on the information sworn out by Captain Crooks. Three charges were preferred against Forney and McHenry by the police, but Attorney Le Gulloun says these three charges must be combined into one of felonious assault on final hearing.
